There again, "to be perfectly courteous," as our esteemed contemporary

We have never said a word sagainst Mr. Wadsworth on account of his loyalty to the Union, nor have we a word to say against any junuigh that score. We could not have said anything against Mr. Wadsworth because of hisjoposition to secession and rebellion, for we have from time to time, producely the proof to show Republicans that he was not a loyal man. We have proved that he was little better than a bushwhacker in Congress—that his vote was cast in nearly every instance against the measures that were considered necessary for preserving the integrity of the Union. He was stanted time and again/on the hoor of the House by the Republican leaders on secount of his equivocal attitude toward importantly public measures, and it was these very taunts; that provoked many of the ridiculous uterances we have printed. Mr. Wadsworth, in 1864, oved for McCleilan, the Democratic candidate for Preddent, who ran on a platform that declared the war a failure and that the constitution/inad been repeatedly violated in all its parts, and this vote by Mr. Wadsworth was entirely consistent with his/course in Congress. have no doubt of his service in the interest of Frank Powers.

Referring to our remarks about the Hon. Weatherook H. Wadsworth, the New Republican says:

"Does it perceive that it casts opproblem on the parks of the Green and the firm of the property of the property of the Hurt, Colonel Wolford, and Generals "McClelland, Hancock and Rosscrans," and that it is heaping reproaches upon "the graves of its numerons allies who "tought for the Union and voted with "the Democrata"

No, we do not perceive any such thing. We have never written a line that can have such a construction. They were good and tree men, brave and humane. It is not a part of durresed nor of the creed of those who think as we do, to find fault with men who truly and honestly declared for the maintenance of the Union and who proved their lath by their works. We are after people of an entirely different character. It is our purpose to strip the cloak from the shoulders of people who are credited with the lopating and patriolism of these men, who never did as they did, to show that they are nothing but pretenders—that they are sailing under false colors. That is all we see trying to do.

THE GERMANTOWN FAIR.

Special Correspondent.

Saturday, the last day of the Germantown fair, draw the largest crowd in attendance for many years and ended the thirtieth, the most successful meeting ever held by this association. Fairs, as a general thing, do not impress one with their newness and novelty, but this time the managers departed from the regular routine and introduced features original and entertaining without questioning their sense of morality or prudence. In fact high tonel principles were observed throughout by the board and presiding officers, and if there is an instance where unfairness and partiality were exercised the agrieved ones should place the responsibility npon the awarding committee and not upon the officers themselves. The lack of material to select from was one cause for dissatisfaction in selves. The lack of material to select from was one cause for disastisaction in regard to judges in the floral hall. The courtesy extended all strangers and pa-trons of the fair was characteristic and pointed. We could use a column of this paper in expatiating on the many kind-nesses shown us by Mr. Walton, the Sec-relary, and our entire writing tablet in citing attentions extended us by Presi-dent Bradford and especially the Bract-en board of directors. It was a noticden Bradford and especially the Bracten board of directors. It was a noticable feature on the part of retired members of the association, that they took as lively an interest as ever in entertaining visitors by their good company and excellent dinners. However, the absence of one whose genial companionship so many attempted to fill, was greatly deplored. The death of Mr Henry Smoot, one of the charter members of the association, marks an epoch in the society's history, still there survive him many directors of loyalty and worth to the comretors of loyalty and worth to the com-

The farmhouse of Charles and Peter Dorsey, four miles East of Flemingsburg, was destroyed by fire on Friday, causing a loss of $500. The house was insured in the Farmer's Home Mutantal Insurance Company for $400. The origin of the fire was accidental.

At the recent annual meeting of the Mayaville Artificial Ice Company, it was decided to increase the capital stock with a view to enlarging the capacity of the works immediately. The company has been unable to supply the demand this season, but next season the product it is expected will be doubled.

Jonoe W. P. Cooxs and Mr. George R. Gill, addressed a large and enthusiastic meeting of the Cleveland, Hendricks and Powers club at Rectorville on Saturday evening. Forty names were added to the club which now has a membership of one hundred and fourteen. Wadsworth men are said to be scarce as hen's teeth in that part of the county.

Mn. Ostranders Concan died at his residence in Carrollton county, Ky., on Thursday, Oct. 9th. He was a brother of the late Dr. Coburn, of Germantown, Ky., and a brother-in-law, of Dr. A. H. Wall, of this city. Mr. Coburn was worlly citizens, and will be monraed by a large circle of relatives and friends in this and Carroll county. Dr. and Mrs. Wall were with him in his last illness.

The Frankfort Capitals asys: Hon. E. Whitaker has just been elected chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of Masson County, and is three of the Ninth Congressional district. Jusie Whitaker is one of the best Democrats in Kentucky. Always brave, active and true, a fine speaker and an industrious worker, we are glad to see him at the bead of the Democracy in the Ninth Congressional district. Jusie was different produced more tobacco than as exporters of the speaker and an industrious worker. We a house of Cincinnati, familiar to every producer in the tobacco district, needs no word of recognition here. By its acquaintance with the leading producers and consumers as well as exporters of country, it has become the enterprising house of the world and the headquarters for America's famous Mason district that has produced more tobacco than all the rest of this continent. This ended a social and a financial success of the Germantown fair.

THE CIRCUS OF TO-DAY.

The Last of a Series of Reports by Our Particulars Wherein it Differs From the Special Correspondent.

Old-Time Exhibition.

When the most pretentious circus in the world, "The Greatest Show on Earth," arrives here, many who remem-ber the country performances of the cir-cus as it existed in their younger days will go with thousands of others and be-hold really a revelation. Mr. Merriman, and the here-we are-again" clown will not be seen but in their seast will be not be seen, but in their stead will be not be seen, but in their steal will be seen twenty-richt clowns, not one of whom will speak a word, but all will act, caper, laugh, contort, distort and do such pantomimic things as will make the old as well as young laugh until their sides ache. They will behold wonders in na-ture, astounding fests and marvelous ex-bibition of training which will securally ture, astounding fests and marvelous exhibition of training which will actually bewilder them. The purity of the exhibition, its instructive character and the perfection to which its every feature is brought under a show such as the United Barnum and London, is as useful as it is always instructing. Children look on with the wonder and delight they experience from the first fairly tales to which they listen. Here are the Arablan Nights brought into life before their eyes. The more advanced portion of the antilence more advanced portion of the andience are none the less captivated, and at the end of the show their astonishment is are none the less captivated, and at the end of the show their astonleiment is complete. And no wonder. Nine shows in one, and each one an enormously large one. An elephant pavellion, with Jumbo, the white sacred elephant purchased from King Theebau for $200,000, the baby elephant and mother, the white or bleached elephant, and forty others of these monster animals, all trained. Three big circus rings, each forty-free feet across, an elevated stage, a nussuu of living wonders, an ethnological gongress of savage tribes, a real Roman hippedrome, with thrilling race, eighty circus acts, three han lived performers, six hundred and fourteen people with the shows, seventy-nine railroad cars, ween solunce advertising cars, four hundred horses, and myridas of curious thrus comprisches nine shows. For they will all the here on Saurday, October 18, when the great free street procession will take place. great free street procession will take place at 8½ o'clock in the morning. The cress of the entire country has extravagantly endorsed and upheld this monster inus ment enterprise for the real merit it con-tains as a public educational Institution.
